The Trust's strategic programme was to bring together a wide range of health and social care personnel and services into three centres. The first, Hollywood Arches, combines a new building with a radically refurbished existing health centre with the area between then providing a light and welcoming atrium. This building is nearing completion. The Lisburn Road project has received planning approval and work has begun on site. The design for Castlereagh is complete, but the project is not yet on site.

Our experience in working with many GP practices and other primary and community healthcare staff was invaluable in discussing new ways of working with staff for these projects. We were also able to identify with them the benefits which could be achieved for both clients and staff by the design of the buildings.
